Requirement of Staggered Selling Period

Staggered Selling Period: It has become increasingly necessary for companies listing on Euronext. Euronext has implemented "staggered selling periods" to give new investors confidence of a stable share price at listing. The recent successful listing of CVC on Euronext, Amsterdam is an example of this requirement.

CVC, Listing and The Benefits of Staggered Selling

CVC Prospectus: "Strategic Investors and the Blue Owl GPSC funds (in respect of their existing shareholding), and for a staggered period between three and five years after Admission for the Company's directors at Admission and all Management Shareholders."

CNBC: Shares of Amsterdam-listed CVC, one of Europe's largest buyout companies, traded nearly 24% higher at around 12:30 p.m. London time.

CNBC: "Any international company that looks at listing in Europe now looks at the Euronext market." The stock had opened at more than 17 euros ($18.25) per share, significantly above the 14 euro offer price, reaffirming strong investor appetite for the company.

"It is a very strong signal of the comeback of IPOs in Europe, in particular in continental Europe," Euronext's Boujnah told CNBC's "Squawk Box Europe" on Friday.

The London Tunnels PLC, Staggered selling

The London Tunnels PLC: It is proposed that The London Tunnels PLC may have "staggered selling" of existing shareholders investments starting after the placement of shares by the Company. Investors will be able to sell 25% of their shares every 90 days. This is believed to be in the best interests of all investors and the best interests of the Company and should improve confidence in the listing of The London Tunnels PLC on Euronext Amsterdam.
